Reeves Regional Health Salutes Auxiliary Members During Volunteer Week

National Volunteer Week, April 19–25, highlights the spirit of service at RRH

PECOS, Texas (April 20, 2026) — Reeves Regional Health is recognizing the dedicated members of its auxiliary during National Volunteer Week, April 19–25, and thanking them for the time, care and community spirit they share in support of the hospital and the people it serves.

At Reeves Regional Health, volunteers represent an important tradition of service. Their support reflects the kind of neighborly commitment that helps strengthen local healthcare and reinforces the connection between the hospital and the community.

“Volunteer service says a great deal about the heart of a community,” said Brenda McKinney, CEO of Reeves Regional Health. “These individuals give of themselves in meaningful ways, and their presence is deeply appreciated. They help reflect the caring spirit that is so important to Reeves Regional Health.”

McKinney said volunteers contribute to the hospital in ways that go beyond any single task or event.

“They help create a welcoming environment and a sense of connection,” McKinney said. “Whether they are supporting hospital activities, lending a hand where needed or simply being a positive presence, their service matters. We are grateful for their ongoing dedication.”

The RRH Auxiliary continues to be a valued part of the Reeves Regional Health family. Volunteerism remains an important part of community life in rural West Texas, where local institutions often depend on people who are willing to step forward and serve.

This year, Reeves Regional Health is pleased to recognize the following auxiliary members:

Anallency Ramirez, Director of Program Development, said being volunteer is a meaningful way to support local healthcare close to home. “Our auxiliary members care about this hospital and about the people who depend on it,” said Ramirez. “It is rewarding to be part of something that serves the community in such an important way. Each member brings her own strengths, but all of us share the same desire to help.” Ramirez said the auxiliary is built not only on service, but also on a shared sense of purpose.

“There is a real feeling of pride in supporting Reeves Regional Health,” Ramirez said. “Volunteering gives people an opportunity to stay involved, contribute in a positive way and be part of something bigger than themselves.”

McKinney said National Volunteer Week is an appropriate time to pause and recognize those who continue to give back through service.

“We are proud to honor our auxiliary members and thankful for all they do,” McKinney said. “Their loyalty, generosity and willingness to serve are a blessing to Reeves Regional Health and to the community we are here to serve.”
