Reeves Regional Health Moves New Clinic Forward

Hoar Construction Selected for Project

PECOS, Texas (Oct. 5, 2026) — Reeves Regional Health is taking an important step toward the future of local healthcare with the selection of Hoar Construction as the design-build contractor for its new Rural Health Clinic. Scheduled for completion in April 2029, the facility will include 61 clinic rooms and represents a significant investment in the people of Reeves County and neighboring West Texas communities.

The announcement marks a milestone in bringing the new clinic from planning toward construction. It also signals confidence in the community’s future, with a project focused on supporting local healthcare for years to come.

“This is an exciting moment for Reeves Regional Health and the communities we serve,” said Brenda McKinney, CEO. “Our new Rural Health Clinic represents a commitment to the families who depend on us today and those who will need us in the future. We are proud to move this project forward and take another meaningful step in strengthening healthcare close to home.” Current plans call for the project to be funded through Reeves Regional Health’s cash reserves.

The new clinic will build on the role of Reeves Regional Rural Health Clinic as a local resource for patients and families. For many residents, a clinic visit is the starting point for a lasting relationship with a medical provider. Investing in the setting where those relationships develop is an important part of planning for the community’s healthcare needs.

With 61 clinic rooms planned, the project represents a substantial commitment to outpatient care. The new facility will provide space to support the work of medical providers and their teams while helping Reeves Regional Health prepare for the years ahead. Its significance extends beyond the building itself to the patients, caregivers and families who will use it.

“We want our community to see this project as an investment in their everyday lives,” McKinney said. “Having a local medical team you know and trust matters. This clinic will help us build on those relationships and give our team a place to continue caring for our neighbors.”

Hoar Construction’s selection establishes a key partner for the project’s next phase. Under the design-build approach, design and construction are coordinated through a single contracting team.

The clinic is also a welcome boost for Pecos and the surrounding area. A major healthcare investment can reinforce a community’s confidence in its future and its ability to remain a place where families choose to live and work. For Reeves Regional Health, the project reflects a continuing commitment to being part of that future.

Local vendors and contractors will have opportunities to participate in the project by bidding on specific portions of the work. Their involvement would provide a way for area businesses to contribute to the development of the new clinic.

The project follows another major milestone for Reeves Regional Health. In November 2022, the organization began serving patients from its new $115 million, 140,000-square-foot hospital campus. The planned clinic represents a further investment in the local healthcare system and its ability to serve West Texas communities.

“Healthcare is an important part of a strong community,” McKinney said. “We are grateful for the opportunity to build on the progress already made at Reeves Regional Health. As this project takes shape, our focus will remain on the people behind every appointment and every visit. They are the reason this investment matters.”

Groundbreaking is planned for April 2027, with completion scheduled for April 2029. The contractor selection marks an important step toward that goal and a new chapter for Reeves Regional Rural Health Clinic.
